

It is a clear example to me of the dangers of media consolidation to learn that Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to air the anti-Kerry documentary close to the November election.

Sinclair is able to use the public airwaves free of charge. This makes them obligated by law to serve the public interest. It is not in the public interest to show just one side, a film depicting Kerry as not being an honest man.

The actions of Sinclair's showing of this very slanted film demonstrates that we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. The license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
